After the war nearly destroyed it by releasing an aggressive virus, it was the vaccine that killed the humanity's chances for progress and survival. Deanna feels guilty because she has participated in creating the vaccine, and General Mackenzie never lets her forget that. Their luck changes when they are contacted by the convicts held in a secret military prison hidden in the arctic desert. The deviance criminals are willing to negotiate and provide unaffected DNA samples in exchange for supplies and a visit paid by the doctor herself. Suddenly there's hope, so Deanna embarks on a dangerous journey to a grittier reality than she had expected. Could a woman alone save the world?.
